Built in 1890, this church shares its birth year with the City of Ballard. It was constructed to serve the German Congregational Church led by Pastor Gottfried Graedel. It closed for lack of support after ten years. For a short time the building was rented to the Ballard School Board to house a school.

Other congregations used the church in the mid-1950s, including the Zion and Apostolic Lutheran congregations. The church stands today at 1763 NW 62nd Street.
